The Brazilian Northeast also faced a severe drought in the years 1970 to 1972. The volume 1 Drought and Man: The 1972 Case History ...) is indeed a good book. Volumes 2 and 3 by the same author (Rolando V. Garcia) and collaborators, who give it sequence, complement very well the history of Drought in the Sahel, in 1970s. It was difficult to complete this collection. But it was worth.

Drought and Man: The 1972 Case History, Volume 3: The Roots of Catastrophe is a two-part book that focuses on the structure roots of catastrophe, as well as case studies in this field. The book begins with an explanation of drought, agricultural production, self-provisioning, food insecurity, and social disjunctions. The case studies presented focus on disjunction between sectors and within agriculture in Latin America; regional and subregional disjunctions in Northeastern Brazil; political will and disjunction in Tanzania; and colonial disjunction in the Sahelian countries.
